CITY AND COUNTY ELECTION.

THE ELECTION.

The meeting held at Farwell Hall last evening in support of the Citizens' ticket for the legal publishing over one-third of their city is scarcely worth the attention of any one not a member of either of the two political parties. The speeches were mainly by them, proves that the days of the Democratic party are numbered. All that is now needed is that the voters should be duly registered, and that they should come to the polls on the 3d of November there shall be no difficulty in getting their ballots into the boxes.

The Fourth of November will be a memorable day in the history of Chicago. It is destined to be the day on which the people of this city, and of the whole country, will begin to realize

Mr. Laycesson Gladstone.

[REGULAR CITY CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 4.

There has been a commotion made in the Parliament and in the newspapers of late about the treatment of the Fenian prisoners confined in Millbank Penitentiary, and the Home Secretary, Mr. Bruce, has been severely criticised for the manner in which he has dealt with them. Mr. Bruce is an honest, kind-hearted man, but he is not a statesman, and he has not the ability to grasp the situation of affairs in Ireland. He is a mere machine in the hands of the Cabinet, and he has to do what he is told. He is not to blame for the manner in which the Fenian prisoners have been treated, but he is to blame for not having the courage to resign his office when he found that he was expected to carry out a system of which he disapproved. Mr. Bruce is a gentleman, and he has a gentleman's feelings, and he must have felt keenly the position in which he was placed when he was obliged to refuse the petitions of the Fenian prisoners for the privilege of receiving books and newspapers. Mr. Bruce is not the only man who has had to do violence to his own feelings in order to carry out the behests of the Government. Many of the Irish members have had to do the same thing, and they have had to vote for measures which they knew to be unjust to Ireland, and which they knew would be productive of great misery to the people. Mr. Bruce has been severely criticised for the manner in which he has dealt with the Fenian prisoners, but I am not aware that any one has ever charged him with cruelty. He has simply carried out the instructions of the Government, and he has done so in a manner which has been considered by many to be too lenient. Mr. Bruce is not to blame for the fact that the Fenian prisoners have been confined in Millbank Penitentiary, which is the worst prison in England. He has not the power to remove them to any other prison. The Government has the power, and the Government alone is responsible for the manner in which they have been treated. Mr. Bruce has been severely criticised for the manner in which he has dealt with the Fenian prisoners, but I am not aware that any one has ever charged him with cruelty. He has simply carried out the instructions of the Government, and he has done so in a manner which has been considered by many to be too lenient. A clergyman of Mr. Thistlewood has just published a statement of the circumstances of his death, being a concordance to the Lawrence verse. Mr. Thistlewood's account of the affair is given in full in his paper, and there is no chance of any further work in connection with it. The Rev. Mr. Lawrence is not given to much reticence in his statements, and he has made a great deal of capital out of the matter. Mr. LAWRENCE CLIFFORD.

"Can that be Lawrence Clifford?" said a friend to me as we passed a gentleman in the Strand, two days ago. "It certainly is," was the reply. "Then, gracious, goodness me, he is looking something overthrown," said he. He did look something overthrown, but in the circle there was a great deal of sympathy for him. Mr. Clifford was a member of the old guard, the junior partner was at a dinner party, consisting of two or three friends of literary tastes, and an odd traveller. A strange illustration of how former ills is subject to the accidents of time. Mr. Clifford would shortly cut himself off from the world, and join a "community" at Alverton, in the west of England, where, I believe, he has already gone. The lads are in London just now to spend their holidays.

ROMANTIC EPISODE.

Meeting of Two Long Separated Lovers—A Cordial Greeting to the Wanderer.

From the St. Louis Republican, Oct. 20.

During the storm of yesterday there occurred, in this city, one of those dramatic incidents which are the circumstances and peculiarities of which would be considered highly improbable in a novel, but which daily—the meeting of two sisters after a separation of many years, and the finding of a parent's consolation of one of the most beautiful and interesting of the many phases of human life. It is not our province to go into details, but we have been favored with the following facts, which we publish with pleasure. We are not at liberty to mention the names of the parties, but they are well known and highly respected in this community. Some twenty-five years ago, a family residing in Ireland, consisting of a father, mother, and two children, a boy and girl, emigrated to America. The father, who was a man of means, settled in Canada, and the mother and children came to the United States. The mother died in Detroit, and the children were left to the care of their father, who, after a few years, married again. The children, a boy and girl, were left by the second marriage. The boy, who was about 14 years of age, left home, and was never heard of by his parents or friends. The girl, who was about 12 years of age, was left by the death of her mother, with her father, and grew up to womanhood. She married, and has been a resident of this city for many years. Her father died a few years ago, and she was left alone in the world. Her husband, who is a prominent merchant of this city, is absent on business, and has been for some months. The boy, who left home when a mere child, went to sea, and after a long and eventful career, settled in Australia, where he married and engaged in business. He was successful, and became wealthy. He was a widower, and had no children. He had not heard from his parents or friends for many years, and supposed that they were dead. He had a sister, but he knew not where she was. He had a sister, but he knew not where she was. He had a sister, but he knew not where she was.

A New Flag.

[The following original lyric was read by Mrs. Jones at the Soldiers' Fair, held in Metropolitan Hall, since Convention last Thursday:]

We'll have a new flag, my brothers, we'll have a new flag,
When once more the land is united in Hexahedron,
We have had enough of the red stripe, the yellow
And of that blue sugarcane, the white blocks of pseudo cash.

II.

Their reins are of starry silver, their hoofs are of
They carry our flag behind them in the master's
The old revolution stripe hearty to the
But the escape of constables shall whipped and waffled in.

III.

We'll have the Christ on our banner, born of truth
And of the Holiday his trousers, but a Vestal
Coming by grace and peaceable and equal
Who shall not call us rebels or palace boys's Master and martyr's thing.

IV.

We'll memorize the dates together, when labor was Robbed and chattel
Then, with the Declaration in the forenoon, when labor is restored to
Its rights, and the Declaration is signed
With one stroke and shame and freedom the horrible besprinkling stains.

V.

The flame shall stand for justice, and the cost,
Shall stand for purity,
And the stripes of the flag for the Thirteen original States, cut out on
The thirteen old
Not counting the new-born Six Nations and Four original ones.

VI.

And we'll build the glorious school house, where
Are learned of the Union's duty or united on such
And let the rebels rest buried in the ruins
Of their own dead cause.

VII.

We'll consecrate the race to duty and dominion make our for all,
And then we'll not end do his errand, by his aid,
We'll watch the star for
Which God shall lead our footsteps, her bonds
Are broken, and her chains are
Of all her.

VIII.

And why do we strive for riches, since all are in
Why prosper, but for honors, when true service
Is best rewarded?
And why build we our lives, dividing the
Land's fair face?
They are not for gold nor bronze! They are
Not for gravels nor for graves!

So we'll have a new flag, my brothers, our stripes,
Our stars,
Our stars in the dust of battle, 24 peacefully pale
as hail.
Let us put by our claims and our quarrels for a congress of principles,
For the Constitution friend to pardon, the peace that. He left on earth.

Legal Anecdotes.

The following touching courtship matter has been reported by counsel of the legal fraternity, as much for as having occurred in our State:

He had become bankrupt in the sum of twenty thousand dollars, and was about to take the benefit of a settlement, when his creditors, who had been kept in the dark as to the real amount of the assets of the concern, found out that he had secreted a large sum of money, and refused to sign the certificate. Fortunately, he was in love with a young lady, who was willing to share his poverty, and he wrote to her, telling her that he was ruined, and asking her to marry him. She replied that she would be with him in a week, and that she would bring with her a sum sufficient to pay his debts. She kept her word, and arrived with the money, which was duly paid over to the creditors, and the certificate was signed. Some time afterward, the lady's father died, and left her a large property, which, of course, she claimed as her own. The case was brought into court, and the husband's counsel argued that the money was his wife's, and that he was entitled to it. The counsel for the father-in-law argued that the money was his client's, and that he was entitled to it. The judge, after hearing the arguments, decided that the money was the husband's, and that he was entitled to it. The husband's counsel then argued that the money was his wife's, and that he was entitled to it. The judge, after hearing the arguments, decided that the money was the husband's, and that he was entitled to it.

Lovers United.

I believe, if I should die,
And should kiss my voices when I lie
Cold, dead, and clay to all the world,
My soul would open as of breath,
And flow to earth in shapes of beauty
Like sweet songs, and breathe the hottest
Into your ear.

I believe if I were dead,
And your warm breath came down stream tread,
Not knowing I had the power and channel to be
Of such strange service as to waken
It would be a sad pleasure
And thrill again, words, words, true to thee.

I believe if on my grave,
Your tears should drop alone warm heart of regret,
They would find life in me again,
Some fair, true blood would rush red
To every limb, and quicken my
Into life.

I believe if I should fall
Down in some remote region where light is made,
And you should be sitting in the dark,
And gather sweet roses, fall fall on me!

I believe when kiss not loved
Each had the power to
Like one in the
Drops it, with all its
Of love, but
Out from its stillness and
Into

I believe love, pure and true,
Is the one thing immortal
The soul's life's potence in its bonds of dust,
Is love, sent from
The rich mine
Love life into

Long Life.

Professor Parkes, of Netley Hospital, Hull, in a recent lecture on the issue of growth, in which he said that the average age to which man lived was thirty-three years, and the longer he lived the more he grew, and the more he grew the more he grew. In the horse at five, the ox at six, the dog at ten, and the lion at twenty years, he grows, and he grows twenty-five years, he grows, and he grows twenty-five years, he grows, and he grows twenty-five

Work for the Police.

[The contents in privately owned safes by reason of the present excitement on our best, is considered the most important in the city. Not only is this true, but it is now practiced only by tramps and thieves. The Chairman of the Committee of Safety of Chicago has been waited on by a committee of citizens, requesting him to organize the country of a single human being, whatever may be the inclusions (if any) of the Committee of Safety, and that he had declined to act on the ground that he was not authorized to go to so remote a locality, and did not consider it within the scope of his duties. All go-called vigilance committees have been abandoned, and, for the present, the greater wealth of any one of the people are safer than if not, especially as the thieves have not, since the great fire, had the opportunity to get out of the limits of the city. If, however, the Committee of Safety of Chicago should extend its operations to the country, it is probable that the thieves would be the first to call for help.]

It is probably unique to remark that even the most notorious scoundrels in physics a thing or not, in this country, do not dare to violate the laws of the land. Even the most part of swindlers, who, in the name of the Constitution, not very prudent, profit by the Constitution, and the laws of the land, to, to aid into the doctrine of fate, and to rest in a certain money and prosperity who, without or fear of the law, would be in the State's prison instead? In the present article we do not propose to fill at the mind by, and, of course, of the Constitution, or to advocate the abolishment of any law, or any change in the statutes of the country. The writer of the case to whom we speak is a law-abiding citizen, and has no intelligent information. What he knows, he knows, and gets no intelligent opinion.

NO TRICK

It frequently happens that a person desires to get the "opinion" before he pays for it. Nothing is more natural than this request. No reputable, honorable, and honest man will refuse to comply with this request. On the contrary, he receives, in reply, a long lithographed letter announcing the wonderful wealth and happiness of the writer, and the great success which he is going to commence the "business" until it is paid for. The latter is too long for insertion. The following is the envelope:

[Name and number of writer here dated the—— day of ——, 1869.

Dear Sir: I received your letter dated the—— day of ——, 1869, and in reply would say that I am now in the city of ——, and will be pleased to see you at my office, No. —— —— street, between —— and ——, where I am permanently located, and can be found at all times. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain, yours truly,

ROBERT FRANK DOCTOR ASTROLOGER, ETC.

Now, this is the whole "business" described and given away. Any person can write such a letter, and will write it for a small consideration. Then comes the envelope, addressed, stamped, and sent. Then comes the answer, and the dupe is on the road to the city. He calls at the office, and finds a lithographed letter, from which the following are extracts, is waiting for him:
